Overworked.
Into the hall, black room the twilight falls,
A single ray of warmest sunset amber
Shedding a glow upon the cold white walls,
The only cheering thing in all the chamber.
Silent, with folded hands and drooping head,
The work-girl sits beside her poor pale table;
Her fingers, which all day have piled the thread
Are idle now because no longer able.
The greedy stuff which vex her aching sight
Seems strangely out of place and out of keeping
In that high still where the shadowy night,
Like some black phantom, up the wall is creeping.
Silent she sits, and on her thin, pale face
There rests a sickly gleam of patient, hopeless sadness;
In all her life since childhood she can trace
Scarcely anything that wears the look of gladness.
Her wandering thoughts glide back across life's stream
To those far shores grown indistinct with distance,
And amidst the scenes which fill her waking dream
She half forgets the misery of existence,
And lives in blissful fancy o'er again
The vanished joys which once her heart had tasted,
While yet her days were innocent of pain,
Ere yet her youth and freedom had been wasted.
The shadows gather round her in the room,
And still she dreams of that which can be never;
Cumbrous of the twilight's deepening gloom,
She gazes back into the vast forever.
Ah, if our eyes possessed the power to look
Upon the future, dim and all uncertain,
And read our lives as in an open book,
What one of us would dare to lift the curtain?
—N. G. Shepherd in the N. Y. Ledger.

VARIETY.

It is said that women first resorted to tight lacing to show mankind how well they could bear squeezing. An honest man is the noblest work of God but a woman is the prettiest.
The happy parent of a new-born baby asked Quill, to whom he was exhibiting it, if he had any children. "Nary red," was the brutal response.
Bachelors are not entirely lost to the refinement of sentiment, for the following toast was given by one of them at a public dinner—"The ladies, sweet briars in the garden of life."
Josh Billings says: "That if a man is going to make a business of serving the Lord, he likes to see him do it when he measures out onions as well as when he bellers glory hallelujahs."
A lady wished a seat in a crowded hall. A handsome gentleman brought her a chair. "You are a jewel," said she. "Oh, no, I am a Jeweller, I have just set the jewel."
Rich men have usually more need to be taught contentment than the poor, because all men's expectations grow faster than their fortunes.
A French paper relates that when Rothschild was asked whether he would not like to become temporal King of the Jews in Palestine, he said: "O, no, I would rather be a Jew of the Kings than King of the Jews."
It is said that in some parts of Germany the women do all the work; a man there must make his living by the sweat of his brow.
Connecticut milkmen do the courting up and down the country. A young girl near Hartford was applied to by a two-month widower to come and take charge of his six motherless children. She said: "Yes, sir; as your wife; not otherwise." She went.
"I shall be," and "I might have been?" The former is the music of youth, sweet as the sound of silver bells; the latter the plaint of age, the dirge of hope, the inscription for a tomb.
A John Bull, conversing with an Indian, asked him if he knew the sun never sets on the Queen's dominions. "No," said the Indian. "Because God is the reason why," asked John. "Because God is kinder to trust an Englishman in the dark," was the drowsy savage's reply.
At a Sabbath school meeting in New Hampshire the history of Samson was the subject of examination. "What foolish thing did Samson do?" was one of the questions put. A little one replied: "He went down among the Philistines and got a wife." The Samsonian weakness was thus exposed to the amusement of many.
To shake off trouble, you must set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat, go and visit the poor; inquire into their wants and administer unto them; seek out the desolate and oppressed, and tell them of the consolation of religion. I have found this the best medicine for a heavy heart.—Howard.
JOHN BILLINGS ON MARRIAGE.—You ask me which is the best, the married or single condition? Most everybody, at some time in their life, has tried the single state; also, most everybody has hankered after the double state, or married condition. I have tried both states, and am really too aware, that if a man can get a woman who can fit packages on both sides without bumping them, and don't hanker to be a woman's kinsman, the married state is a heaven and earth all to one. But after all, the married state is a good deal like falling out of a cherry tree, if a person don't happen to get hurt, it is a good reason for not trying it again.—Howard.
The finest idea of a thunder storm extant was when Wiggins came home right. Now Wiggins is a teacher, and had drunk too much lemonade, or something. He came into the room among his wife and daughters, and just then he tumbled over the cradle and fell whop on the floor. After awhile he rose and said:
"Wife, are you hurt?"
"No."
"Girls are you hurt?"
"No."
"Terrible clap, wasn't it?"
WHAT OUR PARLORS SHOULD BE.—Don't keep a solemn parlor, into which you get into but once a month, with your parson or sewing society. Hang around your walls with pictures which tell stories of merriment, hope, courage, faith and charity. Make your living-room the largest and most cheerful in the house. Let the place be such that when your boy is gone to distant lands, or even when, perhaps, he clings to a single plank in the lone waters of the wide ocean, the thought of the still homestead may come across the desolation, bringing always light, hope and love. Have no dangerous about your house, no room you never open, no blinds that are always shut.
